

Name that mangō

Did you know that the waters around Aotearoa New Zealand have more than 70 different species of shark living in them? Inā rawa | That's amazing! Can you work out who these mangō are?

I'm the second largest fish in the world. I have hundreds of small teeth, but I would rather swim around with my mouth open than chew.

My head reminds people of a builder's tool.

We travel in packs, so we're named after man's best friend.

New Zealand is a hot spot for my kind. We are a protected species.
